TOR OF CAPACITY BUILDING OF COFFEE FARMERS' COOPERATIVES AND INPUT SUPPORT FOR DIVERSIFICATION

1. Background and Justification

The North West Development Authority (MIDENO) is an administrative public establishment created by Presidential Degree No. 81/350 to support, coordinate and oversee rural development in the North West Region. The mission of MIDENO was to respond to the slow pace of development in the Region. Agriculture (crop production and livestock) is the mainstay of the Region. The specific responsibilities assigned to MIDENO are as follows:

- Conducting development studies;
- Educating and training farmers;
- Organizing the community and promoting the cooperative movement;
- Improving farming methods and setting up pilot estates;
- Enhancing access of farmers to improved planting materials;
- Intensifying plant protection campaigns;
- Improving livestock production;
- Providing access of farmers to agricultural loans;
- Transforming the socio-economic environment and improving the living conditions in rural areas
- Conducting any study, research or operations connect with rural development in the then North West Region.

In the light of the above mandate conferred to MIDENO, the institution has been committed uninterrupted to improve the access of farmers to improved seeds / seedlings such as maize, beans, yam, coffee, plantain, cassava, coffee, oil palm and solanum potato depending on the needs of the farming population of the North West Region.

In the absence of industries, agriculture remains the main source of income and livelihood for the populations of the North West Region. More than 80% of the population of the Region is involved in agriculture. The major crops cultivated include coffee, maize, Irish potato, cassava, beans, yam, groundnuts, rice, vegetables, oil palm, raffia palm, plantains/bananas and cocoa.

Over the years, MIDENO has worked hard to empower the North West Cooperative Association (NWEA) as the main farmer organization facilitating coffee production and marketing through its network of primary cooperative societies and unions all over the Region. In the 1970s and 1980s, coffee (both Arabica and Robusta) constituted a major source of income for farmers of the North West Region with over 50,000 farmers involved and an average annual tonnage of 12,000. The North West Cooperative Association (NWCA) was the main organization facilitates coffee production and marketing through its network of primary cooperative societies and unions all over the Region. Between 1982/1983 to 1989/1990 MIDENO within the framework of its activities reinforced the NWCA and its input distribution network by putting place a credit line to stimulate coffee production. Most farmers depended solely on coffee production to meet the basic needs of their families and to raise capital for other investments.

Before the close of the 80s, world price of coffee fell drastically to barely 200 CFA francs per kg. Other factors compounded to usher in serious economic malaise which discouraged coffee farmers in the North West Region. The liberalization of the sector and the withdrawal of the state subsidies from agriculture and the liquidation of the National Produce Marketing Board (NPMB) further worsened the situation of farmers in the Coffee sector, who are mostly small holders. Many nonprofessionals invaded the sector and quality issues were ignored. Input prices went up. More than 70% of farms were abandoned; others transformed their coffee farms to the production of food crops for subsistence and cash. Production has since dropped in quantity and quality to a current production of barely 1000 tons. The coffee unions and the societies were not able to generate enough money to pay the farmers produce upon delivery.

NWCA, the coffee commercial apex organization in the Region has kept up effort to encourage the few farmers who still have faith in the crop. The NWCA has also restructured its unions and primary societies to market reduced volume of produce to handle. MIDENO on its part has supported the NWCA in the restructuring process of its organs (Coffee Cooperative Unions). Since 1982, MIDENO has made significant intervention in the coffee sector in the NWP in collaboration with the NWCA and the PDARD. Within the framework of one of its projects called the North West High Plateau Rural Development Project phase I which ended in 1989/1990, MIDENO put in place a credit line to boost coffee production in the Region. The loans were granted through NWCA using its affiliated primary societies and unions. In this connection, 6 Rural Development Centers (RDCs), 59 Farmer Service Centers (FSCs) and 10 Trials and Demonstration Centers (TDCs) exist in well studied coffee production areas in the NWP constructed by MIDENO.

The economic crisis which led to the fall in coffee prices and the withdrawal of the state and the subsequent liberalization of the sector led to serious problems encountered by NWCA. Most of the farmers withdrew from the cooperatives and sold their coffee to private buying agents. The recovery of loans given to farmers through the unions and primary societies became an uphill task. NWCA could not raise enough money to buy farmers produce at good prices and to pay upfront. In an effort to cut down costs within the structure and maintain viable economic units and improve on the incomes of coffee farmers, NWCA was restructured with the support of the International Coffee Partners (ICP), German Development Cooperation (GTZ) and MIDENO from sixteen unions (16) to seven (7) and the 172 Cooperative Produce Marketing Societies (CPMS) in the Region were merged to 43. The objective of this merge was to ensure that farmers reap maximum benefits. Since then, MIDENO has been working with the RDARD and NWCA to map out strategies to promote coffee production in the North West Region. It is within this drive to revamp the sector that MIDENO gave out over 150,000 improved coffee seedlings to farmers to replace their old coffee plans and to those willing to open up new coffee plantations.

Within the framework of projects under the ambition of MIDENO such as the GP-DERUDEP II and GP-IRDP, a giant coffee process plant was acquired for NWCA and a revolving fund to boost coffee production put in place. The coffee transformation plant is functional but not operating at its optimum capacity and one major constraint diagnosed is limited market for the final product. In the light of the above, the North West Development Authority (MIDENO) approached the Minister of Commerce and solicited for allocation of Coffee export earnings to enable the Authority continue to promote coffee production, processing and marketing in the North West Region.
